Part I — Preview

Why is the DOD pretending it does not recognize the cause of the Gulf War Syndrome symptoms, just like the DOD pretended it did not know the Agent Orange (dioxin) poison symptoms?

- How did a contagious and deadly mycoplasma, which was possibly genetically engineered, get into the bodies of over 50,000 Gulf War veterans, their family members, and their pets?
- How did this mycoplasma fermentans (incognitus strain) become a rampant infectious disease in the Huntsville facility of the Texas Department of Corrections years before the Gulf War?
- Why are the Defense Department, the Veterans Administration, and the Center for Disease Control ignoring the existence and overwhelming evidence that approximately half of the Gulf War Syndrome cases are caused by mycoplasma incognitus and the other half by organophosphate (nerve agent/gas) poisoning and the nerve agent pre-treatment pills?

- Why is the Defense Department knowingly allowing the general blood supply to be contaminated by mycoplasma incognitus carriers?
- Why are the Veterans Administration Hospitals not treating mycoplasma incognitus infected Gulf War Syndrome sufferers with doxycycline and other antibiotics known to kill mycoplasma incognitus?
- Why has the Department of Veterans Affairs, up until very recently, been claiming that these ailments are all in the veteran's head, just like they did with Agent Orange?

in developing and supplying the Iraqi government with chemical and biological weapons prior to the Gulf War. Kawaja was speaking from first hand knowledge. He and his security company, International Security Group (I.S.G.), had been providing security for some of the Iraqi principles at their PIT plant in Boca Raton, Florida where weapons grade cyanide (Prussian Blue) was being produced. The nearly unbelievable information which Peter Kawaja gave about our government's activities formed the starting point for this series of articles on Gulf War Syndrome and systemic corruption in the federal government.

In the fullness of time many historical events come to look quite different than they were portrayed at the time of their occurrence. Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm are just such events. Who does not remember how suddenly that evil Saddam Houssein sent the Iraqi army into defenseless peace loving Kuwait? Who does not remember how the freedom loving government of the U.S. was so outraged by this evil act that it mobilized world opinion and both western and Arabic nations to form a coalition to remove the Iraqi army from Kuwait? Who does not remember how we were told that Iraq planned to invade Saudi Arabia next and that the West's oil supply was in danger?

Some months ago, I was listening to my favorite radio show on KPFFK, the Roy of Hollywood show. Roy was re-playing an episode of another radio show by Jeff Rense, The End of the Line Show. Jeff was interviewing Peter Kawaja about our government's involvement
